Developing And Working With Volunteers

I n order to "attract" volunteers, you have to produce beautiful, fragrant flowers in your ministry. Of course, the Lord is the one who brings the workers, but your ministry philosophy, style, and reputation all go together to attract Godly servants who are looking for a place to serve their Lord. Your attention to the facilities, training, and support for those who work alongside you are the flowers that attract the volunteers!

V olunteers need a healthy home! You can provide a healthy home by caring for their basic needs of food, shelter, and water. When their needs are met, they will naturally produce a delicious harvest of sweet spiritual "honey."

A sense of security under your "umbrella" of leadership

A framework into which they can place their own efforts

Grouped with others who encourage and support ministry efforts

A comfortable environment, safe from harm, and close to water and food.
